Campbell Patrons File Protest Petition

Postal Department Asked Not To Change Campbell Rural Routes

The following petition signed by over 500 patrons of the rural route service out of Campbell has been forwarded to the Fourth Postmaster General, and it is hoped that the department will see the strength of the petition and act accordingly.

Fourth Assistant Post Master General,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

The reorganization of the Rural Mail Delivery System to go into effect on March 1, 1916 will take from the Campbell Postoffice all of its three rural routes, giving one to Los Gatos, five miles South, and the other two to San Jose, 6 miles distant Northeast.

We, therefore, wish to enter a protest for the following reasons; When the Rural Delivery System was about to be adopted by the Department, the Campbell district was selected as one of the few favorable places to begin the experiment, and this service has steadily developed to its present high state of efficiency. This growth is partly due to the good level roads but more particularly to the rich and thickly populated territory served. The records show that the routes out from Campbell covering only 67 miles delivered during the month of October, 1915, 30,621 pieces of mail weighing 5,256 pounds, and collected 6,208 pieces which weighed 700 pounds. This will be constantly increased as our ranches are being rapidly subdivided into small holdings and is a strong reason for not disturbing present conditions of our very satisfactory service.

Many of us have settled in this district on account of these advantages and now go for our mail oftener than once a day which could not be done if we were to be served through San Jose or Los Gatos. The Postoffice must be nearer at hand for this purpose.

With the growth of the Campbell Rural Service has grown intimate business relations between the business institutions of the town of Campbell and the patrons of the Rural Delivery Routes, which should not be disturbed. Also out side the town and served by the Rural Delivery have grown numerous businesses, such as poultry farms, hatcheries, Packing Houses, etc., some of which have a large interstate business conducted mostly through the mails. A change in the routes will greatly disturb their business interests. The railroad shipping center is Campbell, our advertisements and stationery identify us with Campbell and our postal service should continue to bear the same address.

We feel that our property has increased in value and will continue to be worth more on account of its proximity to the thriving town of Campbell and nothing should be done by the Department that might in any way interfere with its growth and prosperity.

We believe that the inconvenience and loss to the patrons of this office will many times out weigh any advantage the Postal Department may hope to gain by making a change in the Rural Routes.

We, therefore, respectfully request that this order be recinded so far as it effects the Campbell Rural Routes.

Officers Installed

Palm Leaf lodge, No. 560, Fraternal Aid Union met in regular session Jan. 26th. The meeting opened in ritualistic form by the President, Robert Scholz and all officers were at their stations.

The event of the evening was installation and the following members were installed by the Past President, W. R. Coupland; Past President, Robert Scholz; President, Edward O. Evans; Vice-President, Cynthia R. Inman; Chaplain, W. R. Coupland; secretary, S. J. Brandenburg; Treasurer, Bessie Lloyd; Guide, Ellen Lanphear; Observer, H. E. Brandenburg; Sentinel, J. W. Lancaster; Trustee, J. W. Lancaster; Musician, Ruby Crow.

After lodge the committee called all to the banquet room where hot tomales and coffee were enjoyed. The next meeting will be this Saturday night and is to be a rally meeting. Let all members attend.

Campbell Boy Goes To Responsible Job

Jesse Hayes sailed Saturday aboard Shinyo Maru for Manila and Cavite, P. I., as superintendent for the Construction and Engineering Co. of San Francisco, in charge of the construction of four government buildings at the Naval Radio station at Cavite.

Mr. Hayes is one of Campbell's boys who has made an enviable reputation for himself and his selection by the company for this responsible position is a great compliment to his engineering ability and his many friends at Campbell are justly proud of him and wish him all success in the Orient.

He will be there eight or nine months it is thought.

Mrs. Sturtevant Called Home

The Campbell community was shocked Friday morning when the word was received that Mrs. W. D. Sturtevant had passed away during the night. Death was so sudden that many of her friends were not aware of her illness.

The funeral services, held from the house Saturday afternoon, were conducted by the Los Gatos Chapter O. E. S., the ritualistic service being very impressively given by Mrs. R. Rucker, worthy matron, and E. Hoag, patron.

Rev. W. H. Lloyd, a friend and former neighbor of the family, and Rev. G. E. Atkinson gave short talks as to the generous and thoughtful disposition and noble character of their deceased friend.

W. S. Shelly sang "No Night There" and later "Nearer My God to Thee" was sung by the O. E. S. team.

Beautiful floral offerings were sent by the Los Gatos Road Club, Charity lodge F. & A. M., Los Gatos O. E. S., the Country Woman's Club and Mother's Club of Cambrian, which societies have sustained a great loss in her passing.

The remains were taken to Lodi, where interment was made with Christian Science services.

Mrs. Percival Sturtevant was born at Parkersburg, Iowa. After her marriage, she came to California, living at Lodi for seventeen years, at San Quentin four years, during which time Mr. Sturtevant was warden, and the past five years at Campbell.

She is survived by her husband, W. D. Sturtevant, daughter, Mrs. R. W. Mills, and two sons, Elwood and Howard, all living at Campbell.

The heartfelt sympathy of the many friends of the family go out to the bereaved ones.

Men's Annual Feed

The annual men's supper and entertainment at the Congregational church this (Friday) evening promises to be one of unusual merit. The supper in the hands of men (only) has ever been a real banquet.

The principal feature of the program which follows the supper is the reproduction of the last Improvement Club banquet and its speakers as seen by a humorist. The "laff and grow fatt" idea is a hobby with the program committee and you will surely enjoy their interpretations of Judge "Green," Mr. "Snukoms," Mr. "Kodeck," Mrs. "Stigbie" and others. Musical numbers will also be given under peculiar circumstances.

Supper will be served at 5:30 and with the program will cost 25c. The "laff" is free. Get all you can.

The Cabinet officers of the County Alliance of Epworth Leagues held the quarterly meeting Sunday afternoon at the M. E. church in Campbell. The officers were later entertained at lunch by Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, fourth vice-president of the Alliance.

Have You Any Gumption?

No—this isn't an impertinence. It's a vital matter to us! It is this way:

A lady came in the store yesterday, and said, "Mr. Blaine, I've just tried a can of those 10c-string-beans, and a 10c-can of asparagus. I must say that they are both fine. It seems to me that anybody who had any gumption would buy these, while fresh vegetables are so scarce and high."

Now, we have a high opinion of Campbell folks. We think that they are just full of gumption—that's why we ordered an extra stock of string-beans and asparagus, in cans.

If Eyes Tire Easily

Are Glasses Necessary?

One of two conditions is indicated if the eyes get tired sooner than they should when doing close work. The nerve energy to the eye muscles is insufficient, or there is a defect in the visual functioning which produces a strain that keeps the nerves and muscles of the eyes overworked. In either case glasses are very necessary to preserve comfortable vision and save future worry and regrets. I am prepared to give you the proper glasses for such cases. METHODS OF MANAGING MIND

Psychology and Its Effects Will Be Found Well Worth Anyone's Patient Study.

Despite the difficult look of the word, psychology is a most interesting and intensely fascinating subject. Briefly, it is the science which deals with the extraordinary effect of the mind on the body, says London Answers.

To make matters clearer, here is a simple instance of ordinary psychological effect. You are cycling, and come to a long, steep hill. If you let your eyes dwell on the hill and its length a feeling of depression and discouragement at once affects you. That is communicated to the body, which instantly tires and loses energy.

The hill, sight, mind, muscles—there's the psychological sequence.

But if you keep your eyes fixed on the road just ahead and pedal on that strange "tired out" feeling doesn't come. It's quite weird.

Soldiers, tired to the point of exhaustion, will revive and march with energy if the band plays.

Why do we prefer a twisting road for a long walk in preference to one which, if shorter, stretches out like an endless ribbon straight in front of us? To avoid the psychological depression of spirits which the long, straight road gives.

Now you can see that a study of psychological effects is practical and useful.

An interesting example of being psychologically "unsensed" is to be found in the attitude of civilians living in the fighting zone of northern France. The effect on them has been such that they have lost the "danger sense."

They go about their ordinary occupations apparently careless of shot or shell. It is not bravery, nor is it resignation; their attitude is a psychological one.

A commercial traveler has stated that he always knew when the psychological moment had come for him to snap the order he had been angling for. That is, he noted the swing of the wavering mind, and booked his order before his customer was "balanced" again.

The best safeguard against being psychologically affected is to maintain your hold over your mind and to keep your feeling in equilibrium. Manage your mind and don't let it manage you!

The best antidote to ordinary, everyday life psychological effects is to have many interests in life—one main one, and the rest side lines, as it were. A busy mind keeps its equilibrium, and where stern common sense reigns psychological effects have no place.

The subject is worth studying, is it not? Follow it up. This article touches but the fringe.

Indian Folk Song.

In Philadelphia, a short time ago, I heard the first performance in America of a new composition by one of great Italian, Busoni. It was played by the composer and by the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra under the baton of Leopold Stokowski, who declared that this new work was possibly the most important step in musical development since Debussy first began to break fresh paths in tonal and harmonic relations. This composition, already played with great success in Europe, is built entirely upon American Indian melodies—not imaginative inventions of the composer, but genuine Indian songs, for whose authenticity I can vouch, as I myself wrote them down from the lips of the Indians in the far West and later gave them to Busoni at his request.—Natalie Curtis in the Southern Workman.

Monument for Hindenburg in the Alps.

The Liskelle mountain in the Carinthian Alps, near the present Austro-Italian theater of war, has been renamed "Hindenburg Height." On the summit of the mountain, one of the highest of the Carinthian chain, an obelisk will be erected in honor of the victor of Tanneberg and the Masurian lakes. The work has already been started under the direction of Architect Arnold of Hanover. The dedication of the monument is to take place next summer and Field Marshal von Hindenburg has promised to be present at the ceremony with his wife.

Waste Mica Now Used.

Mica mining in the United States began in 1803 with the opening of the Ruggles mine, in Grafton county, New Hampshire. Until mica mining began in North Carolina, about 1867, New Hampshire furnished the entire output of mica in the United States.

In 1914 North Carolina ranked first in the value of its mica output, and New Hampshire second.

Mica is still obtainable in considerable quantities from the dumps of the old mines in New Hampshire, at which material for small sheets was thrown away thirty or forty years ago.

Umbrella With Fan Attachment.

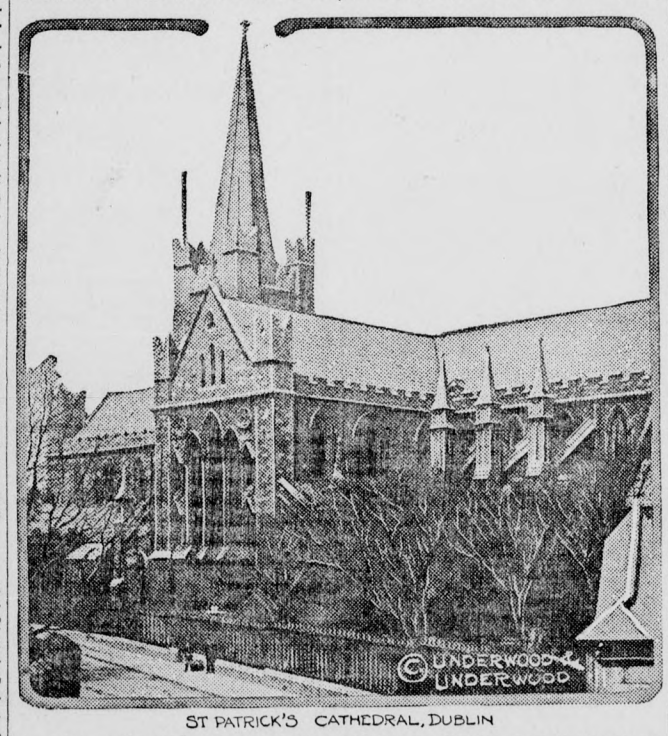
To circulate air below the canopy of an umbrella a patent has been issued on the invention of Sylvester Onyskow of Jenkins, Ky., in which a fan with folding blades, so that it can collapse with the umbrella, is arranged directly below the canopy and a suitable motor battery and switch mechanism for driving the fan is also carried by the umbrella.

DUBLIN AND BELFAST CONTRASTED

THE HUNDRED miles that separate Ireland's capital from the capital of Ulster form as wide and deep a gulf as if they separated the capitals of any two continental countries. The outward aspects of the cities, the spirit and ideals of their people, the predominant religious sects, the attainments, all are distinctly contrasting. "You won't like Dublin; it's a d-a-rty place," was the prediction of a Belfast woman. But the warning did not prove to be justified. The fact is, I liked Dublin very much better than I liked Belfast, which, to be sure, was very little, W. P. Conant writes in the Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Outwardly, the cities are entirely dissimiliar, though their natural setting is very like. Belfast is a great monotony of red brick, scarcely relieved throughout the succession of its long, unlovely streets by any artistic touches or show of architectural appreciation. Its wildness of barefronted houses are hardly distinguishable from the linen factories, which in many cases, occupy parts of the same block, and are designated only by a small brass plate that sets forth the firm's name.

Belfast boasts that she has no slums. She also has no conspicuously fine streets of houses that are distinguished by esthetic taste or architectural excellence. Mostly, her regular blocks have the plain, bare features of barracks. On the other hand, Dublin, often referred to in disparaging terms, is likely to prove an agreeable surprise to the traveler. She has slums, yes, some very squalid ones, and they force themselves upon the visitor's notice as aggressively as the slums of Edinburgh at the lower end of High street. If one stays but a day in Dublin one is likely to go away with an unfavorable impression of the place. If he stays a while and allows the early impressions to be effaced and their place taken by pleasant ones, he will judge the city more fairly. If one were to stay a year and make some strong and certainly delightful attachments, he is bound to be sorry at the leave-taking and will ever regard the city on the Liffey with tender affection.



ST PATRICK'S CATHEDRAL, DUBLIN

Homes of the Irish Capital.

The homes of Dublin are its glory. Go out Donnybrook way, or north in the Phoenix park neighborhood, or south to the region about Harold's cross, and you will find street after street of stately Queen Anne houses that suggest for all the world the Mayfair region of London; while the modern villas that form a wider circle about the city—charming cottages with gardens, and ample homes of pretty design and having plots of bright flowers in their front yards—recall the pleasant suburbs of the progressive American cities of the middle West. Then the public buildings. Belfast's boast is its city hall. Once the stranger has his grip unpacked he is urged to go and see this splendid structure. It is undeniably fine. But one could almost wish that the Belfast people had spread their variegated marbles about the city rather than concentrated all this elegance on one spot. The city's bare, cold churches might have been brightened, both architecturally and in their creeds, by an esthetic touch here and there, while the public library's brown bareness would have been relieved by a dash of the rich bright colors which the city hall could readily have spared.

Closely Resembles London.

The likeness of Dublin to London, conspicuous in the aspect of its houses, is further carried out by the style and relative location of the monuments and structures which form its proud adornment. The Nelson pillar, with its statue to that Irish hero on the top, closely resembles the statue to the same naval hero in Trafalgar square, London, only lacking the surrounding guard of lions. This column is the pivot around which the life of Dublin revolves, just as Charing Cross is the western pivotal point of the English capital. Lower Sackville street runs south, to the O'Connell bridge, and continues across that broad structure to the ample avenue on the opposite bank of the river, with the rounded facade and stately line of columns of the old parliament building on the right, and the solid, classic mass of Trinity college on the left.

How close the resemblance to the London scene! Whitehall and Parliament street are readily recognized in the breadth, style and direction of Sackville street and College green, while the British house of parliament is represented by Trinity and the governmental buildings of Downing street by the stately old Irish parliament house. Even London's statue of the duke of Cambridge, in the center of the road to Westminster, finds its counterpart in the midst of the roadway at the northern end of the bridge which bears his name. The Liffey river asks but little exercise of the imagination to fancy it a shrunken but not less worthy Thames; the arching bridges remind one of their fellows that span the English stream; while the Dublin custom house, in both form and situation, corresponds in a striking degree to St. Paul's cathedral.

Then there is Dublin castle, the seat of the vice-regal government that irks the nationalist spirit of Ireland, beneficent and moderately wise though it is today. St. James' palace is easily its prototype in the visitor's mind. The central courtyard, entered through massive stone archways, give upon what are monarchically called the state apartments and also upon the headquarters of the two-score of governing boards under whose overseership the spirit of Ireland is restive.

Scotch Walk Belfast Streets.

Belfast is a scoured and Puritanized Lawrence or Paterson, with Scotch men and women walking its streets in their early and late tramp, tramp, to and from mill and shipyard. Dublin is a prerevolutionary Boston—like Boston, English in street names and much like Boston, to be sure, in the character of the largest element in its population. Like, yet unlike, for the transplanting has made some radical changes in human qualities. The American visitor to Dublin will find it less Irish, as he thinks, than Boston herself, while the English stranger in Boston would find us more Irish than even Dublin. This is a cryptic remark which only those who know will understand. Dublin is a softer, quieter Boston of 1914, with General Gage in authority and red-coated British sentries stationed about her public buildings and government offices.

This, then, is the way it appeals to the sojourner—these rival, jealous cities of whose people Belfast folk say pharisaically that "oil and water can never mix." Dublin represents the warm heart of a nation. Belfast is its hand—a dexterous pairs of hands, if you will. One hopes this "red hand of Ulster" will not again be a bloody hand. The chill winds that sweep across Divis mountain and Cave hill, the bare, bleak eminences that rise behind the northern city, are a driving stimulus to labor and the getting of gain. The soft airs of the valley of the Liffey, environed as it is by the hazy mountains at a little distance to south and east, are relaxing and tend to moderation.

THE SANDMAN STORY

by Mrs. F.A. WALKER

COPYRIGHT BY McCLURE NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE, N.Y.

THE MAGIC KETTLE.

Once upon a time a little girl lived with a wicked old uncle. Her father and mother were dead. She was a very good little girl and did not complain, but one day when she did not have any breakfast or dinner she went into a grove not far from the house and cried.

Presently she saw an iron kettle walking toward her, and its short legs looked so queer moving along the ground she laughed.

There was a spoon in the kettle, and it made a clatter as the kettle walked along. It stopped in front of her. "Don't cry, little girl," it said. "Dry your eyes and do as I tell you." Then the kettle jumped up and hung by its handle on a bush. "Now get some water from the well," it said, "and pour it into me. Then go to the end of the path and take three steps forward and four to the right. There you will find some potatoes under a bush. From there take five steps to the left, and you will find a basket of meat and onions. Bring it here."

Saw an Iron Kettle Walking Toward Her.

The little girl did as the kettle told her, and when she had brought them the kettle said: "Put them in the kettle and then put some leaves and dry sticks under me, clap your hands three times over and say:

Fire, fire, brightly burn,
Cook my dinner to a turn."

So the little girl obeyed and soon had a nice hot soup. "Look behind the rock," said the kettle, "and you will find a bowl and spoon. After this when you are hungry come here an clap your hands three times and say:

Kettle, kettle, come to me,
So I shall not hungry be."

One day the wicked old uncle noticed that the little girl was growing fat, and as he had given her very little to eat, he wondered where she got her food, and he watched her. He heard her call the kettle and build the fire and then find the food. The next day he locked her in the house and went to the place himself. First he called:

"Kettle, kettle, come to me,
So I shall not hungry be."

Then he found the meat and vegetables and then he built the fire, clapping his hands and saying:

"Fire, fire, brightly burn,
Cook my dinner to a turn."

But when he stirred the soup it flew up and burned him, and then the kettle turned over and spilled the soup and put out the fire.

The burns pained him and he was very angry and took a stick and ran to the house. He unlocked the door. "Come out here," he said to the little girl. "You made the kettle burn me; now I will whip you."

But as he lifted the stick a fairy appeared and touched him with her hand, and he became an old tree with one branch, which looked like a stick lifted in a hand. "Now," said the fairy, "you can live happily."

The kettle came running along and went into the house. "You will always have plenty to eat," said the fairy, "for you have the magic kettle and you know the magic secret of building a fire."

The little girl lived alone and gave food to all who stopped at her door, but the tree always made her feel sad and she wished it was not there.

One morning the tree was gone and in its place was a big chestnut tree and under it sat an old man with a staff in his hand.

"Will you please give me a cup of water?" he asked. The little girl gave him the water and also a nice breakfast. "Stay here and rest," she said when he started to go.

"No," said the old man, "I must walk on; I have a long journey before me. I must walk until I find the river of kindness; I missed it in my youth and now I must walk back and bathe in it before I can rest."

The little girl watched him as he walked away and wondered if the fairy had changed the old tree into the old man who was looking for the river of kindness.

WHO WAS ROBINSON CRUSOE?

Not Much Known of Alexander Selkirk, Born in Largo, Scotland—Was Extraordinary Man.

One is sometimes tempted to parody Kipling's famous words, and ask, "What do they know of Crusoe, who only Crusoe know?" For it is a sad fact that, apart from a hazy notion that the original of this world famous character was drawn from one Alexander Selkirk, little or nothing is known of a most extraordinary man, London Answers states.

Selkirk was born in the little Fifeshire village of Largo, in 1676, and from almost his earliest days the unconventional adventurous spirit of the boy brought forth the wrath of his neighbors.

When he was about eighteen he decided that he would go to sea and, having refused utterly to follow his father's trade of shoemaking, he quit his native village. Two years later we find him (at his own request) being marooned on a lonely island after a violent quarrel with the captain of the ship on which he was making his second voyage.

For four years and four months he remained there, but finally turned up again at Largo, while his parents were at church. So to church went Alexander, and seated himself directly behind his father and mother. The good lady, on turning round and recognizing her son, caused the service to be interrupted by her cries of astonishment.

While at home, Selkirk fell in love with and married Sophie Druce. But he did not settle down. After a very short while they both disappeared from Largo.

Nothing more was heard of them until one day, years later, a young woman arrived in Largo, saying she was Alexander Selkirk's second wife, and had come to claim his belongings.

She proved that Sophie Druce had died some years previously and that now Alexander himself had also passed away on board his majesty's ship Weymouth, on which he was a lieutenant.

PUPILS LEARN POULTRY CARE

In Schools of Washington State Children Also Keep Books and Take Care of Live Baby.

School children in King county are putting all sorts of new kinks into the old-fashioned curriculum, to their own enjoyment and profit and with the connivance and approval of the King County Parent-Teacher association, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer states.

These new aspects of education were dealt with at the semiannual meeting of the association.

The pupils of the Ham district school, so Miss Varna M. Knapp, their principal, told the audience, are learning farm, automobile, poultry and dairy accounting.

"Our pure-bred white Leghorns are worth $1 apiece," she said, "and we charge every one of them interest at ten per cent, because we can get ten per cent on the money in our district. There is no depreciation on a chicken that I know of, so we don't charge them with that; but we charge everyone with the food it eats and the value of the eggs it sits on, and credit it with the value of the chicks it hatches. We hope to raise turkeys, celery, squabs, etc., and sell them to you city folks by parcel post. This is a cut at the poor middleman.

"The members of the Ham School club have drawn the plans and made specifications for the equipment of the school's play shed, and will install manual training and domestic science equipment, doing the work of installation themselves. They did all the work connected with a school exhibition at which they raised $25 toward the expense of these things. I sincerely hope the value of these school clubs, both to the children and the rural schools, will be appreciated, so that there may be many of them. The whole secret lies in letting the children do the work themselves."

Child study by the practical method of taking care of a real, live baby is part of the course of the Foster high school, according to Miss E. M. Guilstine, teacher of domestic science. It was a natural development from the needs of the community and the tendency of modern education, she said.

TO PACK POULTRY

Specialists Urge Unusual Care in Preparing Fowls.

Methods Recommended Which Are Essential to Perfect Product at Any Time, Especially When Weather Is Unfavorable.

Poultry packers are urged by the specialists of the United States department of agriculture to give unusual attention to preparing and packing their birds for shipment, particularly if the mild weather, which has been widely prevalent this autumn, continues. The poultry specialists say that the weather conditions in many sections have been very similar to those which prevailed in the autumn of 1913 and which, as poultry shippers will remember, proved disastrous to all packers who did not dress, chill and pack properly.

The specialists, therefore, recommend the particular observance of the following methods of handling dressed poultry, which are essential to a perfect product at any time and are of vital importance whenever weather conditions are unfavorable:

Methods of Handling Dressed Poultry.

1. Keep the holding batteries for your incoming stock clean, well aired, and free from vermin, and see that the chickens have plenty of fresh water and plenty to eat.

2. Don't kill a chicken when the crop is full of feed. Give the chicken only water for 24 hours before it is killed. Food in the crop or in the intestines of a dressed chicken causes loss of flavor and hastens decay, which more than offsets any gain from extra weight.

3. Good bleeding is absolutely essential to a good appearance on the market and retards decay. Circular 61, bureau of chemistry, department of agriculture, explains the best methods of bleeding and loosening the feather muscles for dry picking.

4 Hang the chicken by both feet while picking. Hanging by one leg spoils the shape of the bird. Picking on the lap gets the skin dirty and hastens decay.

5. Dry pick if possible. Scalding is particularly undesirable because it hastens decay.

6. Chill every dressed bird until the body temperature is below 35 degrees F. Never pack or ship an imperfectly chilled bird. More decay is due to imperfect chilling than to any other single factor in dressing. Dry chill, if possible. Chickens cooled in water lose flavor, decay sooner, will not cold-store as satisfactorily as dry-chilled, and are in every way more undesirable on the market. Refrigerator cars will carry well-chilled goods in good condition, but they cannot chill warm goods to a sufficiently low temperature.

7. Pack in boxes or small kegs whenever possible. A large barrel makes an undesirable package, because where poultry is packed in large masses the weight of the upper layers crushes the birds at the bottom.

8. Line all packages with parchment paper and cover the top of the poultry before the lid is put on.

9. Wrap every head in suitable paper so that blood from one bird will not mar the appearance of another.

10. Use only good refrigerator cars and see that they are in good order. Ice and salt the car 24 hours before loading. The car, at the end of 24 hours should show a temperature below 40 degrees F. at a point four feet above the floor and between the doors.

General Suggestions.

Never handle chickens roughly, either before or after killing. Rough handling causes bruises, broken bones, scarred skins, and soft places in the flesh. Undue haste on the part of the killers and pickers results in lowered keeping quality and poor appearance of the product.

Piecework, which leads to quantity rather than quality, makes for lower prices on the market. Those who pay by the piece should remember that they sell by the quality of the piece.

These directions will apply with equal force to turkeys intended for the market.

Don't Expect Too Much.

Even with the best of management and care, too much must not be expected of poultry.

INCOME OF A STREET BEGGAR

Curious Resident on Opposite Side of Thoroughfare Places Contributions at $1,000 Yearly.

There was a certain Bartimeus who was wont to take his seat at the side of a crowded city street, with a well fed dog at the side sitting on a mat provided by his master, to protect his hinder-quarters from the cold stone. The dog held a tin money box attached to his collar. The man had a few lead pencils which he pretended were for sale.

The man simply sat, and the money rolled in. A curious resident on the opposite side of the street took lengthy observations, and then drew up a calculation based on the assumption that one cent was given every time a contribution was made, though frequently silver and sometimes a quarter was seen to descend into the tin, and taking into consideration the average number of absences in a given time due to inclement weather, the probable income amounted to about $1,000 a year.

The estimate may not be very exact, but it is nearer the truth than the ordinary passerby thinks, or the stream of coin would not be so copious. As he is no longer at the receipt of custom, the inference is that he has retired to live in the country on the proceeds.

WITH ONE GREAT COMPOSER

Handel Belonged to No School, Yet Had Style His Own—Scolded Prince of Wales When Late.

German by birth, an Italian by sympathy and training, an Englishman by residence and conformity, Handel belonged to no school, yet had a style as unmistakably his own as had Dante in verse, Angelo in sculpture or Raphael in painting.

Strong, egotistic, self-willed, the great composer was generally cheerful and good-tempered, but violent when irritated, and indomitably proud and independent.

One who knew him well relates that when he was pleased with the way the music was going at one of his concerts, his enormous wig had always a certain nod or vibration, and that at the Carlton house concerts he would swear angrily if the ladies in waiting talked during the music—upon which the princess would check them, saying, "Hush! Hush! Handel is angry."

He did not hesitate even to scold the prince of Wales for being late at a concert and "keeping all these poor people (the performers) so long from their scholars and other concerns."

WOULD OPEN JEWELRY STORE

Household Freight-Payer Tells His Better Half of Fairy Tale Related by Grandmother.

The tea things had been cleared away and the household freight-payer was trying to read the evening paper while his better half busied herself with some fancy work, and at the same time endeavored to interest him in the neighborhood gossip.

"Cordelia," said he, glancing up from his paper, "did you ever hear the story of the precious gems?"

"Why, no," she replied. "What is it?"

"It's an old fairy legend that my grandmother told me when I was a boy," he continued, "about a woman from whose lips there fell either a diamond or a ruby every time she spoke a word."

"Well, go on," said his wife.

"That's all there is of it, Cordelia," he replied. "But I was just thinking if such things happened nowadays I'd open a wholesale jewelry store the first thing in the morning."

Then for thirteen consecutive seconds silence reigned supreme.

No Wonder.

"Gadson tells me he never has any trouble with Mrs. Gadson when he gets home late."

"Lucky fellow! How does he manage?"

"He carries her a big bunch of flowers."

"Umph! I tried that once, but it didn't work."

"What was the matter?"

"I handed the flowers to my wife upside down and she noticed immediately that there was something wrong with me."

Thoughtful and Kind.

"I hate to think of parting with my daughter," said Mr. Scadsworth.

"If there is one trait of mine that I feel proud of, it is my reluctance to cause other people unhappiness," replied the suitor.

"Er—yes?"

"And rather than separate you from your daughter, sir, we will gladly forego our plans for a little bungalow and make our home with you."

PASSING IT UP.

"Mr. Huggins, you seem to be quite a favorite with the ladies at this hotel. If I give you free room and board will you agree to flirt with all the wall flowers?"

"Not me. I'm no lemon squeezer."

A Painful Memory.

"Mrs. Naggs summoned her late husband from the spirit world last night. Went to a spiritualistic medium, you know."

"What did she want to talk to him about?"

"She wanted to know if he still thought of her."

"She might have known that he does. No man can forget a woman like Mrs. Naggs in the short time Naggs has been dead."

Faithful in Death.

"All his life Dobbs was a great booster of his home town."

"An admirable character, no doubt."

"And he kept it up after he died."

"You're joking."

"Not at all. He made arrangements for his funeral some years before he passed away and on his tombstone, following the usual epitaph, was chiseled, 'Next to heaven, there is no place like Chiggersville.'"

Helpful to Her.

"My wife is tickled to death over these new scarf styles."

"Why her extreme approbation?"

"They enable her to cover up two of her three chins."

CALOMEL TODAY, SICK TOMORROW
Dose of nasty calomel makes you sick and you lose a day's work.
Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.
If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.
If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.—Adv.

Outwitted.

A man working at a large colliery in Wales recently outwitted the police in a clever manner.

The police stationed themselves at the mouth of the pit and sent down for the man to be brought up. The man, when told that he was "wanted," thought himself of a means of escape. With the help of some of his mates he was put in a tram at the pit bottom and carefully covered with old timber and rubbish until he was entirely concealed.

The tram was then sent to the surface and was taken right under the eyes of the police to the rubbish tip, where the supposed load of rubbish made good its escape.

Author of "Annie Laurie."

"Annie Laurie" has topical interest for many, since, according to the generally accepted story, it was written by a soldier in Flanders to his lady love at home. The writer was William Douglas and Annie Laurie was one of the four daughters of Sir Robert Laurie of Maxwelton. Sad to relate, says the London Chronicle, Annie did not marry her ardent lover. Some way Douglas was killed in Flanders, but at all events Annie was led to the altar in 1709 by Alexander Fergusson of Craigdarroch.

STILL DOES THE DICTATING

Faithful Stenographer Had One Stipulation to Make on Receiving Proposal of Marriage.

"Miss DeClique," said her employer, 'you have been a faithful worker during the last year and I believe you will make some man a good wife. May I hope to claim you as such?"

"Mr. Oldboy," replied the blue-eyed blonde, "I appreciate your kindness in making me this offer, but before accepting it I wish to say one word. As your stenographer it has been your privilege to dictate to me, but if I become your wife I shall reserve the right to do all the dictating myself, and—"

"Pardon me for interrupting you," said the old man, "but further words are unnecessary. You will continue in your present position, Miss DeClique, and I will add an extra dollar to your weekly salary, which will enable you to drown in ice cream soda any hopes that my words may have raised."

An Advantage.

"What are your qualifications for the position you seek?" asked the eminent official.

"I don't know anything about the job," replied the confident candidate. "That doesn't constitute a qualification."

"Maybe not exactly. But when you get ready to proceed with reforms, it makes me easier to get on with because I haven't any prejudices to overcome."

THE REASON.

"I call this engagement ring 'the cat.'"

"Why, so?"

"Because it always comes back."

Told by Streaks.

"Do you know what that town was we passed through a few minutes ago?" asked the driver of the fast automobile as they flew through space.

"No," was the reply of his companion; "it looked like a yellow streak to me."

"You're right; it was St. Louis."

"Now what's this town we're going through?"

"This looks like a red streak."

"Right you are! Chicago!"

Seems Reasonable.

"I put all the money I had on Happy Boy and the beast didn't even show!" wailed Mr. Sportkins.

"Is Happy Boy a horse?" queried Mrs. Sportkins.

"Certainly, ma'am."

"And he didn't show, you say?"

"Didn't you just hear me say it?"

"Well, if the horse didn't put in an appearance, I should think you could get your money back."

Two Kickers.

"What do you suppose that little long-eared donkey did when I kissed him on the nose?" said the sweet young thing.

"I surely don't know," replied the young man with the pink spats.

"He kicked."

"Did you only kiss him once?"

"Yes."

"Well, I don't blame him. I'd kick, too, if you only kissed me once."

A Martyr.

"When we were married you said there was nothing you wouldn't do for me," said the spoiled darling.

"Well, my dear," answered her husband, patiently, "I was thinking the matter over the other day, and it seemed to me there was nothing you hadn't asked me to do for you, but if there is any little thing in your mind you haven't mentioned yet, speak and I will do the best I can."

A Martyr.

"Your family must be very fond of oysters."

"You don't think I'm ordering oysters by the bushel because we like them, do you? I'm the only one in the family who can eat them at all."

"Then what do you want with so many?"

"I don't want them. My wife wants the shells to make a roadway from the sidewalk to the garage."

Incomplete Comprehension.

"A great many people talk about things they don't understand."

"Of course," replied Miss Cayenne; "if we all thoroughly understood everything it is considered necessary to talk about, we should all be immoderately wise — and sometimes rather impolite."

Good Reason.

"I think Jackson has had a fight with the couple in the apartment next to his."

"What makes you think so?"

"He bought his boy a drum and a bugle yesterday."

FOUND HIS BRIDE IN TOMB

Romance in Life of a Famous Venetian Composer—Sister Substituted Herself in Coffin.

Benedetto Marcello, one of the most famous Venetian composers, fell in love with a beautiful girl named Leonora Manfritto, who married Paolo Seranzo, a Venetian noble. She died in a short time after her marriage, a victim of the harsh and jealous treatment of her husband.

Her body was laid out in state in one of the churches, and her lover actually succeeded in stealing the corpse and conveying it to a ruined crypt in one of the islands, and here he sat day and night by his lost love, singing and playing to her, as though by the force of his art he could recall her to life, says the London Telegraph.

Leonora had a twin sister, Eliade, who was so like her that her closest friends could scarcely distinguish them. One day Eliade heard a singer in a gondola singing so exquisitely that she traced the gondola to the deserted island, and then she learned later the fate of her sister's corpse and the identity of Marcello. Aided by a servant, Eliade substituted herself for his sister's body, and when Marcello returned and called Leonora to awake he did not ask in vain, for apparently she rose alive from her coffin. Marcello, when he found out the delusion, was quite satisfied and married Eliade, but his happiness was short lived, as he died a few years afterward.

MUCH PATIENCE IS REQUIRED

Do Not Get Discouraged in Attempting to Revive Apparently Drowned Person If Results Are Slow.

Any treatment of the apparently drowned, to be thorough, must take into consideration, first, clearing the mouth and nostrils of phlegm and mucus; second, the expulsion of poisonous gases from the lungs; third, the replacing of the expelled gases by pure oxygenated air; fourth, the stimulating of the respiratory organs so that they may assume their regular functions; fifth, the restoring of its normal temperature to the body.

Above all do not allow yourself to become discouraged if your efforts for resuscitation are not prompt in result, says Outing. One might cite dozens of cases reported by absolutely reliable medical journals to prove that life does not become extinct nearly so soon as is generally believed. Men and women, apparently drowned, dragged from the water after thirty or forty minutes of submersion, have been saved. Again, operators have worked artificial respiration for as long as four hours without a sign of recovery, and then seen their noble persistence rewarded by the revival of the patient.

Never despair, therefore. A human life is at stake. Don't give up until the last ray of hope is lost. Keep at it and you'll find that success will usually crown your efforts.

Differentiating.

Little Mary's big sister was engaged to Mr. Brown, who was away on an outing trip with Mary's brother. Her father was writing to them and asked the little girl if she had a message to send.

"What shall I say, papa?" asked she.

"Why," said the father, "I believe it is the fashion to send your love."

"Well," said the little miss, with a sigh, "you may send my fashionable love to Mr. Brown and my real love to Brother Tom."

HEAT FLASHES, DIZZY, NERVOUS

Mrs. Wynn Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her During Change of Life.

Richmond, Va.—"After taking seven bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel like a new woman. I always had a headache during the Change of Life and was also troubled with other bad feelings common at that time—dizzy spells, nervous feelings and heat flashes. Now I am in better health than I ever was and recommend your remedies to all my friends."—Mrs. LENA WYNN, 2812 E. O Street, Richmond, Va.

While Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, the annoying symptoms which accompany it may be controlled, and normal health restored by the timely use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Such warning symptoms are a sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness.

For these abnormal conditions do not fail to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Notice To Fruit Men

The California Prune and Apricot Growers Information Bureau is now open for business at its new offices in rooms 5-6 Farmers Union Building, San Jose. The offices have not been completely furnished as yet but enough has been done to insure a welcome to inquiring growers and a telephone has been installed, the number being San Jose 1620.

All prune and apricot growers and others interested are urged to make the offices their meeting place while in San Jose. There will be men in the headquarters to answer questions and to explain the purposes of the association.

By joining the association the members incur no financial responsibility nor can one later be held on any member without his consent, as the Bureau is in no sense a corporation with all that that term implies. It is simply an agency to bring concerted action on the part of growers in a way, eventually, to increase their prosperity and that of the community. Within a short time the Bureau expects to be in the field with an active campaign for membership and will outline a program for future progress.

Methodist Church Notes

The attendance last Sunday evening was very good, and the meeting as conducted by the Epworth League county cabinet was thoroughly spiritual. We hope to have the same group with us on some other convenient date.

Mr. Lloyd attended the preachers' meeting in San Francisco Monday morning and remained over Tuesday visiting in San Francisco and Oakland.

The Sunday morning sermon will be on the text, "Bear ye one another's burdens;" and the pastor will set forth some of the ways in which that command is obeyed by the church. We will have a combined service in the evening, beginning at seven o'clock. A special Lincoln Sunday printed program issued by the Freedmen's Aid Society of the church will be presented by the young people, with Mr. Kammerer in charge, followed by a brief address from the pastor. Come prepared to take part in the service and at the same time learn what our church is doing for the needy people in the South.

A great Rally of all the Epworth leagues of the county will be held in our church Tuesday afternoon and evening. The afternoon session will be largely devoted to the discussion by workers of methods for increasing the efficiency of our leagues; dinner will be served by the ladies of the church from 5:30 to 7:00 o'clock; and a big mass meeting will be held in the evening, at which the principal speaker will be Dr. A. H. Briggs of the California Campaign Federation.

The Sunday-school board will meet Wednesday evening at eight o'clock.

Leap Year

The custom which ordains that a woman may propose marriage to a man in leap year dates back seven or eight hundred years. An act of the Scottish Parliament, passed about the year 1228, made it a crime punishable by a fine, for an unattached man to refuse to become the life partner of a woman who had the courage to "speak ye mon she liked!"

The custom in a milder form is referred to in a work published in 1606, entitled "Courtship, Love and Matrimony."

"Albeit it has now become a part of the common lawe in regarde to social relations of life that as often as every bissextile year doth return, the ladys have the sole privilege during the time it continueth of making love unto the men, which they doe either by wordes or by lookes, as to them it seemeth proper; and, moreover, no man shall be entitled to the benefit of clergy who doth in any wise treate her proposal with slight or contumely."—From The People's Home Journal for February.

A Father's Club

While mother was studying the needs of her family with scientific understanding, father has been content to act as a sort of police force and a court of last appeal.

The fathers of Council Bluff, Iowa, however, have organized a club for the purpose "of bringing the fathers into closer touch with the children, the teachers and the Board of Education, in an endeavor to accomplish the very best results for the betterment of the children." The club has been organized a little over a year and has been so successful that it is planned to form a federation of clubs with a uniform program. —From The People's Home Journal for February.

The Danish Musical Club will give a Concert in the Congregational church, Tuesday evening, Feb 29.

REGISTER NOW! According to the decision of the Supreme Court it will be necessary for all voters to register in due time before the next election. As the first election to be held here will be the school election in April, every voter should register on or before March 7th. It is the duty of every citizen to take part in the various elections.

Judge A. J. Farley will be at the library building every day between the hours of 9 and 12 a. m. and from 3 to 4 in the afternoon. Naturalized citizens must bring their naturalization papers when they come to register. Don't put off this duty until it is too late.

LINCOLN'S birthday is Saturday, Feb. 12. Many of the schools will hold fitting exercises today. The day should be a state holiday but somebody blundered once on a time. Our first martyred president is without doubt the closest to the people of all our past men and the feeling is constantly growing that he was our best. Let us all do homage to his memory as befits such a one.

Local and Personal

Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Thomas returned Friday from a week's visit at Pacific Grove.

Mrs. R. A. Logan of Palo Alto is here the guest of her daughter, Mrs. A. J. Farley for two weeks.

Frank Custer of Santa Clara Road is reported quite ill, having recently undergone a painful operation.

Miss Esther Hussey of Soquel is a guest of her friend and former classmate, Miss Phebe Farley, this week.

Miss Muriel Palmer entertained a few friends Saturday evening in honor of Miss Foskett of Concord, who was a week-end guest at the J. E. Palmer home.

At the midweek service last Wednesday at the Congregational church, the pastor had a copy of the famous "Jefferson," a photographic reproduction of the book compiled by Thos. Jefferson.

Mrs Geo. Marshman came down from San Francisco Saturday for a week's visit with her mother, Mrs. Rubell. Owing to the illness of a friend, she is substituting at Union School for a time.

The San Jose Churches are planning for a series of united special services. Mr. Atkinson was asked if his church would join in. He said, "undoubtedly just so far as we can, being out of town".

T. J. Roessler who recently purchased the Gilman ranch west of Campbell has arrived from Modesto with his family and is getting settled at his new home. A cordial welcome is extended our new neighbors.

The Epworth League quarterly rally will be held in Campbell Methodist Episcopal church next Tuesday. Dr. Briggs will be the speaker of the evening. Dinner will be served in the lecture room at 6, at 35c per plate.

As Pastoral Counselor of the County C. E. union, the Rev. G. E. Atkinson of Campbell, addressed the young people at the United Presbyterian church in San Jose, Tuesday evening on the subject, "Catching the Vision and Gripping the Machine."

Miss Goude In Recital

The dramatic recital given by Miss Jennie Hazel Goude of Spokane, at the High School auditorium Friday afternoon was a real treat.

Miss Goude's pleasing manner at once captivated her hearers and her dramatic parts were given with rare execution. Her rendition of the "Story of the Mining Camp" was well received, while her comic selections were much enjoyed, especially by the children.

New Club Organized

The Johnson Avenue Improvement Club, organized at the home of Mrs. S. A. Moulton Monday, has taken a most important step in the right direction which will undoubtedly be imitated by our neighbors on other avenues. This new club is the suggestion of Mrs. H. W. Higbie at the annual banquet and the movement was begun by her. The club plans to have at least one delegate present at each meeting of the Campbell Improvement Club. In this manner a closer co-operation of the community interests may be attained.

The officers are: President, Mrs. H. W. Higbie; vice-presidents, Mrs. F. E. Duncan and Mrs. L. F. Shaw; secretary, Miss L. Moulton; treasurer, Mrs. Robt. Hamilton.

Alive Anyway.

"From a physical point of view," remarked the parlor philosopher, "we are much inferior to prehistoric man."

"Well, for my part, I would rather be inferior than prehistoric," replied the mere man.—Judge.

Too Angry to Sleep.

"Do you ever wake up your wife getting in late nights?"

"Never."

"How the deuce do you manage it?"

"She is never asleep."—Boston Transcript.

Improvem'nt Club Busy

At the regular meeting of the Improvement Club Friday evening considerable business was done. The lighting committee reported exceptional progress in their work and within a short time Campbell will enjoy well lighted streets.

The "Old Setters Day" committees reported that most of the arrangements have been completed and a most pleasing program will be given.

Mr. R. K. Thomas reported for the Highways committee that as soon as weather permitted the few bad spots in our streets would be repaired.

A few changes were made in the by-laws. The annual meeting and banquet will be held the first Friday after the first Monday in January. The annual banquet committee was made one of the standing committees. The regular meeting night is the first Thursday of the month.

Friends Entertained

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Smith entertained a small company of friends Tuesday evening at a Leap Year party.

The national colors, in bunting and flags, with sprays of pepper branches, were used in decoration.

A patriotic game was played in which Mrs. Ralph Hyde and her partner, Mr. Alison, carried off the honors, small silk flags.

Later whist and Block were played. Mrs. C. C. Olds and Mrs. J. C. Ainsley had the high score for the ladies, one for points and the other for progressions, and Messrs. E. Barron and R. Hyde for the gentlemen; while little hatchets appeased the feelings of the losers.

After refreshments, music and dancing were enjoyed until the gentlemen insisted that it was time for the ladies to take them home.

Company Improving Plant

The Geo. E. Hyde Company is making extensive improvements in the office of the packing plant. The office will be greatly enlarged with a reception room between the general office and private offices and the scale room will be included with a supply room just next. This arrangement will greatly facilitate the work of the office and better accommodate the patrons.

The company has this week finished packing the last of the dried fruit crop of last year and is preparing for the coming season.

Anniversay Celebrated

Christian Endeavor's 35th Birthday was celebrated at the Congregational Church Sunday with special services for both the C. E. meeting and the evening Church Service. Miss Kathleen Bartle, a former Campbell girl, now of San Jose, and one of the County C. E. Officers led the Endeavor meeting. Mrs. Geo. Campbell of San Jose sang one of her delightful selections, and Dr. Geo. N. Fisher of Morgan Hill, County C. E. President installed the Officers of the Junior C. E. Miss Luella Thompson, another county officer spoke on "The Quiet Hour", her special department. At the Evening Service special music was rendered by Mr. Alec Adam and the Choir. Miss Mildred Orr, county Sec. spoke. The address of the evening was given by Dr. Fisher, who also installed the officers of the local society. Christian Endeavor was the pioneer movement among the young people of the land, and is now represented in practically every evangelical denomination in the United States, and is one of the strongest forces in building up, not denominationalism, but practical Christians among its 5,000,000 and more members. The local society is in splendid shape and doing fine work with its corps of officers.

Congregational Church

"The Friendly Church just around the Corner."

Next Sunday is the Sunday nearest Lincoln's Birthday. We will observe the day in the morning service at 11 o'clock. Special talk to the boys and girls. The Pastor will speak on "Lincoln's Leadership, as indicating the elements needed in the present World Crisis." All G. A. R. Comrades and their wives especially invited. This is a tremendously important theme just at this time.

Sunday-school and Endeavor as usual. Mrs. Roy Archibald, leader at C. E. This is the last day of National C. E. Week", and a vital topic is ours.

We are indeed fortunate in having with us for the evening service, Dr. Gammon of Chicago. Dr. Gammon represents our work in the Mississippi Valley States. He is a fine speaker, and we bespeak for him a large audience. It is not often Campbell gets such an opportunity. You are cordially invited to worship with us at any and all of these services.

GEO. E. ATKINSON, Pastor.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by all Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.
